Smith and Payne To Head Republicans in September

Monday's primary election showed a marked preference of the Republican voters in their choice of candidates for the United States Senate and First District Representative to Congress. The choice of gubernatorial candidate was a closer contest, as were those for some of the county positions.

According to late reports, Margaret Chase Smith won the senatorial nomination with 62,936, more than twice the number given her nearest rival, Governor Horace Hildreth, who received 30,577. Ex-Governor Sumner Sewall trailed with 21,770 and Albion Beverage was given 6,438.

Congressman Robert Hale won renomination by a much greater margin, receiving 32,615 votes. He was followed by Frank O Dunton, 4,554; Ray W Stetson, 4,125; and Gunder Rasmussen, 1,561.

The choice of a candidate for Governor was given Frederick Payne, who received a total of 43,399. George Varney was supported by 35,746; Robinson Verrill, 14,598; Roy Fernald, 14,010; and Nell Bishop, 12,650.

The Democratic choice for candidate for Governor was awarded Louis Lausier with 10,862, while his opponent, Leland Currier, had 7,796.

FREDERICK G. PAYNE of Waldoboro, chosen as Republican candidate for Governor of Maine in the September election.

ROLAND H. COBB of Denmark, who with Ralph E. Edwards of Oxford will seek to represent this County in the State Senate next winter.

ALBERT J. STEARNS of Norway will seek re-election for his fourth term as Judge of Probate in September. He led his opponent, E. Walker Abbott of South Paris, by more than 1,000 votes in the primary election.

Eleven members of the Congregational Cradle Roll attended a party at the home of Mrs G L Kneeland Wednesday afternoon. Those present were: Mrs Harlan Hutchins and Timothy, Mrs George Lothrop and Diane, Mrs Loion Hutchinson and Barbara Jan, Mrs Clayton Bane and Douglas, Mrs Robert Lord and Linda Jean, Mrs Warren Bean and Bethany Sue, Mrs Robert Mills and Charles, Arlene Bennett and Donald Baker, Mrs J A Matheson and John Andrew Jr., Mrs Richard Waldron and Gertrude Ann. FIRE TAKES MILL OF GRAFTON LUMBER CO.

The No. 1 mill of the Grafton Lumber Company was burned to the ground in a quick fire Wednesday afternoon, which apparently was started by an overheated or short-circuited motor. The fire spread rapidly throughout the mill and was beyond control before the mill fire-fighting equipment could be brought into action. The Bethel fire department aided in confining the blaze to the mill.

With the quick spread of the flames it was considered fortunate that none of the men were trapped in the mill. The loss has been estimated at more than $10,000. It is understood that plans plans for rebuilding are already under way, and in the meantime another shift may be employed in the other mill.

Other buildings nearby on the company's land include the No. 2 sawmill, a planing mill and a new planing mill of concrete construction not yet in use, and a large garage and office. The second mill was rebuilt last year on the site of one that burned, and previously their original office building burned.

MAINE'S AUTO CENSUS UP 44.9% SINCE 1941

Maine, with its automobile population up 44.9 per cent since 1941, leads all 48 states in recovering from the wartime low in car registrations, Powel Crosley, Jr., of Cincinnati, pioneer lightweight car manufacturer, points out.

"Such a gain in the Pine Tree State is especially significant," he said, "because car registrations have dropped considerably in the industrial east, midwest and grain states, with marked shifts of population to the south, southwest and Pacific Coast.

"Maine appears not only to have held its own against this trend but also to have improved the economy of its people."

Motor vehicle ownership in this state rose from 193,942 in 1941 to 280,942 last year. Continued progress in this direction, Crosley said, is reflected in the growing demand for small cars which provide economical transportation for many families who have hitherto been priced out of the automotive market.

Based on the recent census figures, there is one passenger car for every 4.29 persons in Maine, the state ranking twenty-second in the nation in this respect.

Mrs Alice Taylor, Grace and Albert Taylor are spending a few days with Mrs Taylor's daughter at Pemaquid. Mrs Taylor and daughter Grace will be employed at Bridgton this summer and Albert will remain at Pemaquid.

BETHEL PLAYERS HANG OUT "MEN WANTED" SIGN

The one-act play "There Are None of Them Perfect" under the direction of Mrs Richard Waldron was presented during the entertainment period of the June meeting of the Bethel Players at the Community Room on Monday evening.

A cast composed of Mrs Addison Saunders, Mrs Walter Jodrey, Mrs Isaac W Dyer 2nd, Mrs Harlan Hutchins, Mrs Philip Chadbourne and Mrs Roland Glines engaged in a discussion of the short-comings of husbands in an effort to dissuade one of the party from seeking membership in their disillusioned group. They were not successful. The skit was presented in the traditional Bethel Players manner.

Mrs Richard Young will direct the social period at the regular meeting scheduled for July 19.

Rehearsals have started on the action-packed thriller "Arsenic and Old Lace" for presentation on a date to be announced in the very near future. The following will participate: Mrs Francis Noyes, Roland Glines, Dale Thurston, Herbert Kittredge, Edward Wheeler, Mrs Murray Thurston, Miss Sally Stowell, Addison Saunders, Harold Rolfe, Dexter Stowell, Richard Young, Richard Bryant, Gardner Smith and Philip Parlin.

The Bethel Players is rapidly coming to the front as one of the town's most progressive and worthwhile organizations but to achieve its ideals a larger membership roll is highly desirable. An actual manpower shortage exists and the leaders worked very hard to complete the cast for "Arsenic and Old Lace," which calls for eleven.

The volunteer method is the best and it is hoped the young, old, and middle-aged boys of Bethel will respond in a manner that will not compel the organization to devise a drafting system. That could be done for the Bethel Players have shown remarkable ability to surmount any and all obstacles with which they have been faced in their brief but highly successful career.

There is no "goat" to ride, no questionnaire to fill out or red tape to unsnarl. Just see any person mentioned in this article, attend the next meeting and your are a member of a society with a mission for community service that is slowly but surely nearing practical application.

LOOKING AHEAD

By GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

A Step Toward Socialism

Dr. Robert A. Millikan, one of the world's most distinguished scientists and Nobel prize winner, has referred to current proposals for federal aid to education as "another of those efforts to clear out the cockroaches by burning the house down." That is right. More federal aid might bring increased teachers' salaries, which all of us want. But I stand in constant amazement that so many folks in the education profession are blind to the tremendous dangers of federal aid.

Not to be outdone by those clamoring for money to be routed via Washington for the public schools, college and university administrators recently climbed on the bandwagon and put in for their share. At a major conference of higher education in Chicago, Dr. Alonzo Myers of New York University proposed a catch-all program that would call for expenditures dwarfing those in public school bills now in Congress.

Take Your Share

Among other things this program would set up an "Educational Reconstruction Finance Corporation." As a government project this bureau would no doubt take bookkeeping lessons from RFC and TVA. Both of these have lurked away millions of wasted tax dollars. Experts have said that it will be impossible for RFC ever to account for all of its funds. After this ERFC, we can expect other RFC's for any group that has enough power and votes to get the ear of Congress.

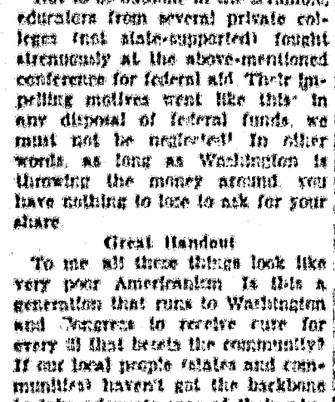
Not to be outdone in the scramble, educators from several private colleges (not state-supported) fought strenuously at the above-mentioned conference for federal aid. Their compelling motives went like this: In any disposal of federal funds, we must not be neglected! In other words, as long as Washington is throwing the money around, we have nothing to lose to ask for your share.

Great Handout

To me all these things look like very poor Americanism. Is this a generation that runs to Washington and Congress to receive cure for every ill that besets the community? If our local people (states and communities) haven't got the backbone to take alternate care of their educational problems then for sure more money from the federal government will not remedy the situation. And that goes for Arkansas too.

But the nub of it is: local communities have done plenty, still are doing things about local and state needs in education. I have no patience with those who hallow the internal propaganda machine in Russia and call it education. We have done more to educate our youth than any Communist country ever will be able to do — under Communism. There's nothing radically wrong with American education. But there will be—if we hand control over to Washington.

Education is one of the biggest enterprises in America. When we give over to the federal government the purse-strings for local education then we have taken the long step toward Socialism. What we must do is get the federal government off the backs of taxpayers. Then the states can collect more taxes and there is no rhyme nor reason left to get education expenses from Washington. We must draw the line on this Congress trend. Let's have no so-called "federal aid."



GETS INTO TROUBLE . . . This is Frank Dale Reece, a loyal Girard college alumnus of New Paris, Ind., whose resemblance to President Truman brought him nothing but trouble after his arrival in Philadelphia for his school's 100th anniversary. Secret service agents were reluctant even to allow him on the campus during President Truman's visit.

Dale Carnegie

IMPORTANCE OF PAYING CLOSE ATTENTION

JUST how much attention do people pay to you when they talk to you? Or, what is more important, just how much attention do you pay to others when you talk to them? If you let your gaze wander while you're talking, you are not getting attention from your listener. Yet this is a trait common to most people. And, as a matter of fact, it isn't very courteous not to give your attention to that other person, is it?

D. Carnegie

Dr. David Powers of the department of speech, Queens college, Long Island, New York, recently told me a story illustrating what giving one's attention means to the one who is listening.

He was telling a story to his little five-year old son. It was a story that had been told and retold, and perhaps his attention to the details, and to his son, was not too intense. As a matter of fact he said thoughts of other things crept into his mind. The little boy sensed this, and when he saw his father looking off into space he suddenly reached up, took hold of his father's chin and turned his face toward his own.

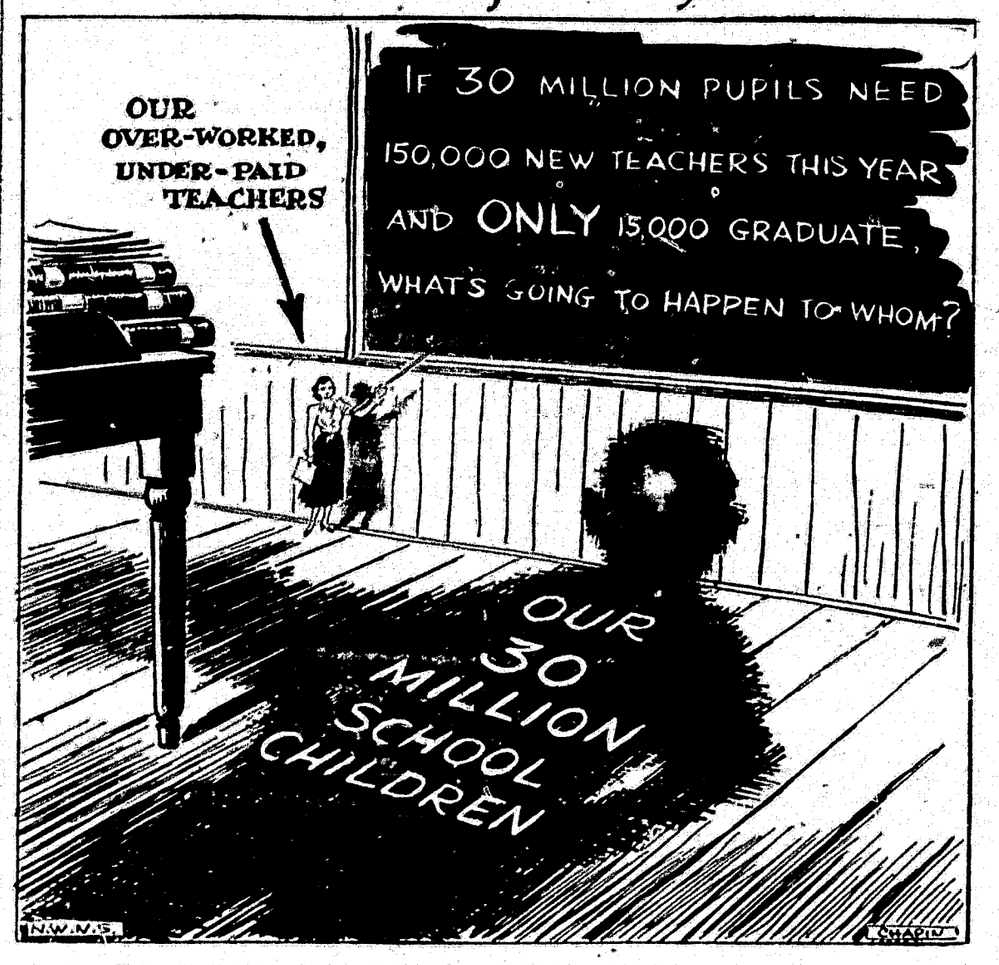
"Look at me, daddy," he pleaded, "look at me. I can hear it better when you look at me."

If lack of attention disturbs a small boy who is hearing a story he has heard many times, certainly it is going to have the same effect on your adult listener. And if you are not going to talk to satisfy your audience, why bother with talking at all?

I've had applicants come to me for a job, and while relating their experiences they would stare at the top of my desk, stare around the room, out of the window, in fact, anywhere and everywhere their gaze could penetrate — except at me. I cannot recall that I have ever considered such an applicant for a job seriously.

If you are applying for a job, there's just one thing that should interest you at the moment—the job. So look at the man who can give it to you, pay him the closest attention. The chances are you'll learn a lot when you do.

"Problem for Today"



We shall love our neighbor as ourself when we perceive that our neighbor in his true selfhood, like ourself, expresses God, divine Principle, Love, for man is God's image. Do we foster in ourselves the qualities we consider worthy, valuable, and enduring, and do we appreciate these qualities in others? Open appreciation of the good characteristics and abilities of others is proof that in some degree these same proclivities obtain in us.

Love for God and man, the fruit of spiritual understanding, must permeate our endeavors to develop true brotherhood, the universal fellowship which Jesus illustrated. St. Paul said (I Corinthians 3:11), "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Universal fellowship must be built on this foundation. Then it will be enduring, founded upon the rock of Truth. — The Christian Science Monitor

by Lyle Abel

Battle of Gettysburg

THE writer is looking out over the mile of open country across which General Pickett led his gallant Confederates in the greatest and bloodiest charge in all recorded military history.

In this final effort of the Southern forces to win the great battle of Gettysburg, eighteen thousand men, in a line one mile long, started out on this heroic charge. A third returned! Nearly a hundred guns poured solid shot and explosive shells into the massed Confederate columns from the moment they started that terrible mile to the time they reached the crest of Cemetery Ridge. And then at point-blank range these same guns riddled their shattered ranks with grape and canister, and massed infantry, at the same range, almost completed the holocaust. Hand to hand fighting raged for awhile and the Union forces fought with the same heroic courage as did Pickett's men.

Many of us hardly realize what it cost this nation in human life and suffering to hold it together so that we and those after us might share its greatness.

The entire French losses, in all the Napoleonic wars, did not equal those of the American nation in the war between the states, and all our losses in World Wars I and II—killed, and those who died of wounds and disease—were about half their awful total. In fact, this conflict cost more in military personnel than any other in history up to the time of World War I—except the Hundred Years war.

The men of the North and South fought for the soil which is America. Today there are those among us—calling themselves Americans—who would deliver this heritage to foreign masters. These weird creatures are either dupes, spies, ambition maniacs, or principally-ignoramuses. For only through glasses of ambition or of ignorance can one visualize improvement for himself or for his country in a change from our present life to one of constant fear.

Perhaps if some of those innocents who are being enticed into a web of vicious and hopeless philosophy were to spend a day on this hallowed ground, they would grasp the meaning of "America," with all its faults but with its grand background, its opportunities for those who are willing to do their share, and—above all—its gift of human freedom and the dignity of man.

The Basis of Fellowship

AMONG all peoples is a deep desire and need for fellowship; not mere human association, but universal brotherhood expressed in spiritual understanding and Christlike compassion. If world agreements could be arranged on this basis, brotherly understanding would prevail, and all men would be amply provided with work, homes, food, clothing, education, and recreational opportunities.

Christ Jesus demonstrated his understanding of God and man by healing the sick, restoring the sinning, and raising the dead, those dead in thought as well as body. He understood man to be the son of God, the expression of infinite Love, the radiant reflection of Soul, Spirit. He attached no race, color, creed, or crime to this reflection, and through his understanding of man in the image of God he taught true brotherhood. True fellowship is a natural outcome of Christlike love—it is the evidence of spiritual understanding.

In the textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, we read (p. 276), "When the divine precepts are understood, they unfold the foundation of fellowship, in which one mind is not at war with another, but all have one Spirit, God, one intelligent source, in accordance with the Scriptural command: 'Let this Mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus.'"

The Mind that was in Christ Jesus is the source and substance of all intelligence. Envy, jealousy, resentment, fear, have no place in this Mind; therefore, these errors of thought cannot be manifested by the man of God's creating. Instead, man, as the expression of God, is lovely and lovable, good and gracious, joyous and free, with no taint of worldliness. He can neither sin nor sorrow, kill nor be killed, for he is the pure spiritual reflection of infinite Love, Life, and Truth. He reflects the justice, honor, intelligence, and strength of Mind, God.

Christ Jesus said with conviction and proof (John 10:30), "I and my Father are one." If each understood this great spiritual truth, thus establishing his true relationship with God, his real Father-Mother, he would demonstrate the brotherhood of man. Misunderstandings cannot arise in the Mind of Christ, nor can they arise in us when we know divine Mind to be the only Mind.

The causes of war are thus seen to lie in the false beliefs and cruel fears of mortal mind. We must remove the cause to erase the effect. God, good, must be acknowledged and demonstrated as the one and only cause. To recognize man's purity as God's reflection elevates both motive and purpose. Thus we shall establish fellowship on a spiritual and lasting basis.

Taxes, Inflation and Your Vacation

It looks as though these young folks have all the equipment for a complete vacation—and it cost them plenty! Their two-weeks auto trip is going to cost them 57 per cent more than it would have in 1940.

Inflation and taxes—the Killjoy Twins—have boosted the costs of your 1948 vacation 20-to 100 per cent since 1940, depending on what kind of a vacation you take and the brand of fun you go in for, according to the family economics bureau of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company.

A 12-day all expense railroad tour from Chicago through Glacier and Yellowstone national parks cost $176.13 in 1940; the tour takes 11 days in 1948 and costs $291.95, up 66 per cent, with transportation taxes accounting for nearly a fourth of the increase.

Though you escape the transportation tax when you use the family automobile, you run into other price and tax increases. A man and his wife can take an average two-weeks vacation trip of 2,400 miles and get by comfortably on about $235 for gasoline, oil, lodging and meals, 57 per cent more than the $150 they would spend for the same items in 1940. This assumes ten nights spent in modern motor courts and four nights in city hotels, in minimum-price double room accommodation with bath. If they choose to spend the entire two weeks, fishing, golfing and swimming at a Minnesota resort, for example, they will find the rates up about a third—a typical resort quoted American plan rates at $36 per person per week in 1940, and $49 for similar accommodations in 1948.

Great Lakes cruises are up only about 33 per cent since 1940, and more than half the increase is transportation tax. The minimum rate, including berth and meals, Detroit to Duluth and return, was $80 in 1940; today the same cruise costs $106.00.

Bus tours show the smallest rise in costs from pre-war—only about 28 per cent, half of which is transportation tax. A 21-day tour of California and the Pacific Northwest, from Minneapolis, costs $114.95 in 1940, and is sold for $147.96 today.

None of the above figures includes anything for vacation clothes, fishing tackle, athletic goods, and—you guessed it—inflation and taxes have been working on these items, too.

Men's sport clothes have generally gone up less than women's. The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' figures show a rise of about 95 per cent for the average cost of all clothing since the summer of 1940, but department store buyers state that 50 per cent is more nearly the size of the increase in male sports clothes.

Golf clubs have almost doubled in price. A steel casting rod that sold for $11 before the war is $17 today. A landing net that sold for $3 pre-war is $6 now. A $5 tennis racket of 1940 is now $8. Even luggage and cameras have almost doubled in price.

If, after checking the above figures, you decide to outsmart the price rise by spending your vacation in your back yard, wearing your 1938 clothes, beware of roasting weiners—they are nearly three times as expensive as in 1940, and wiener buns are up 90 per cent. You'll have to watch yourself, too, or you'll be toasting marshmallows which are 70 per cent higher today than before the war.

From Malachi to Christ.

Lesson for June 27: Malachi 3: 1-5; 4:1-2; Luke 1:76-79.

Memory Selection: Luke 1:68.

Four hundred years passed between the closing of the Old Testament and the coming of Christ. Persians, Alexander the Great, Egypt, and Syria in succession ruled Palestine until the rise of the Hebrew Maccabees who, after a century, were overcome by the Romans. Under the Romans the Herods were ruling as kings in the time of Christ. The literature of this period is contained in the Apocrypha and the Apocalypse, neither of which has been given a place by Protestants in the Biblical canon.

Malachi, last of the Old Testament prophets, writes a warning against the irreligion and the corrupt practices of the time. As with a fire the workers of iniquity would be consumed. But for those who feared the Lord the Sun of righteousness would arise with healing in his wings.

The last words of the Old Testament concern Elijah—he should come in preparation for the "great and dreadful day of the Lord." The name of old Elijah had a peculiar effect upon the imagination of all his people and they looked for one to come who would bear the character and do the work of that great prophet. Jesus likened John the Baptist to Elijah—John came as the great forerunner of Christ.

Prophecy was resumed in glorious fulfillment in the New Testament. The last passage of the lesson is part of the song that Zacharias sang at the circumcision of his son John. It heralds the coming of Christ and rejoices in the blessings to come through him.

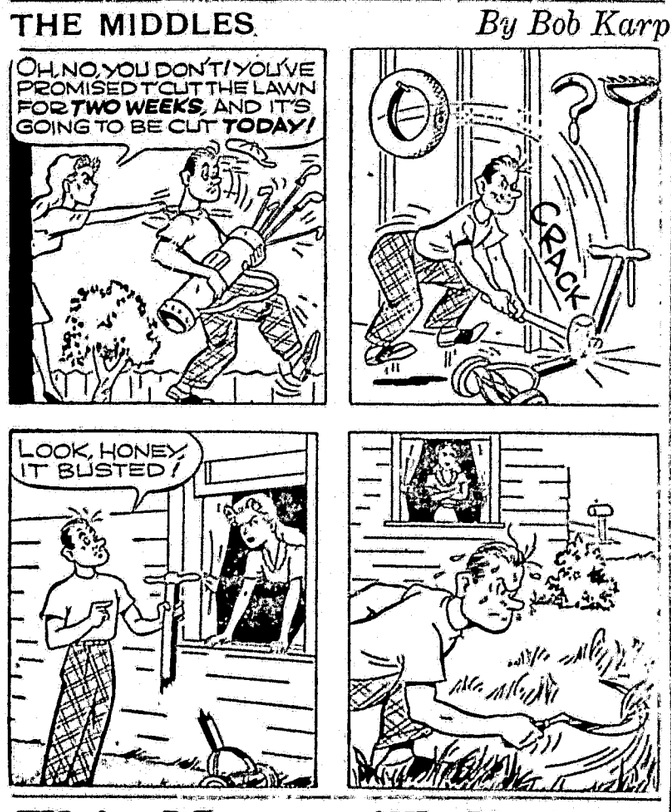
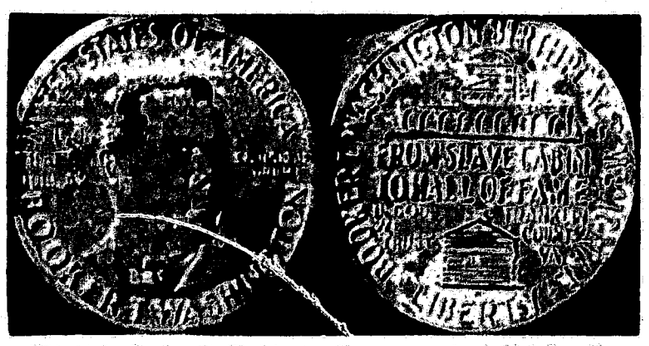
THE MIDDLES — By Bob Karp



This Money 'Talks' The American Way



This is the Booker T. Washington Commemorative half dollar. One dollar mailed to Booker T. Washington Birthplace, Virginia, will bring you the coin and help 14,000,000 Negroes to help themselves.

DO YOU KNOW who I am?

I am an American half dollar but a very rare one. For I was created by special Act of Congress, named the Booker T. Washington Commemorative Half Dollar, and minted by the U.S. Government. Then I was assigned a mission for America.

My mission is a wonderful thing. It is to help many of our 14,000,000 American Negroes who are in need to become self-sufficient citizens; to free them from misery and poverty and disease; to make this a better America by giving them the chance to better themselves.

How am I going to do this? Congress answered that. It authorized that I be sold at a premium price of one dollar, the difference between my par value of 50 cents going toward the building of industrial training schools that will help the Negro people.

These schools will serve as a living memorial to the great American I was named after . . . Booker T. Washington.

Booker Washington was born a slave in Virginia, but from his humble birthplace he rose to the American Hall of Fame as an educator. Before he died he proved that democracy lives for all Americans.

So Congress said that I "should help perpetuate the ideals and teachings of Booker T. Washington."

I want to carry out that mission, because I am a symbol of America and America has never fallen down on a big job yet. Never! Not at Valley Forge, or Chateau Thierry, or Guadalcanal. And we will never fail, because we are a united people.

There will be only 5,000,000 coins like me issued . . . all to be sold for a dollar.

You can get an All-American "Half" by writing to Booker T. Washington Birthplace Memorial, Booker Washington Birthplace, Va. Just send your name and address and a dollar, or more, for each coin.

Your good deed will help me carry out the legend to which I, as an American coin, am dedicated—"In God We Trust."

In Bethel It's The Citizen

The wise merchant stocks his shelves with merchandise the public needs and wants and then proceeds to let all and sundry know that the goods are available and at what prices they may be obtained.

His shelves are soon cleared at a profit to him and with satisfaction to his customers, new goods are obtained and the cycle of mutual profit continues.

The family newspaper is conceded to be one of the best means of getting buyer and seller together and those who use its advertising columns are obviously the logical stores to patronize when fresh, timely, desirable and reasonably priced items are wanted.

It's Up to You

Here in Bethel it's the Citizen that brings you weekly money and time saving opportunities. Its columns are closed to the quack, charlatan and obviously fraudulent advertiser. Citizen advertisers are reliable. Patronize them and tell them where you found their advertising.

If you get a real bargain from a non-advertiser—and there are many reputable organizations in that category—ask them to keep you better informed about future offerings.

May the best dog win

A SHORT-SHORT STORY By MARJORIE ABBOTT

JIMMIE BARNES, with his half-breed collie, Tip, sat close to the kitchen range and listened to his grandfather and Spike Williams arguing. In all the years Jimmie had spent the Christmas holidays with his grandparents, this was the first time he had ever heard old Matthew Barnes and Spike disagree.

"I don't care if you did pay $200 for your new hound, Matt," said Spike crossly, "I'll wager she won't compare with my dog Trumpet when it comes to tracking and holing up a mink."

"We'll each take our own dog and go out after a mink this afternoon."

"Now, Spike," said grandpa soothingly, "I'll grant you.. Trumpet is a good dog. Haven't you and I and Trumpet hunted togethe. for the past eight years? But I tell you, Spike, this here Lady dog I bought two weeks ago has any hound beat I ever saw. She's uncanny. You should see her work."

Spike stood his ground and wouldn't give an inch as to the worth of his dog. Jimmie had learned in his 12 years that a man valued his mink dog as much as his wife—maybe a little more, unless she could cook like grandma.

Spike stood up and stretched. He was well over six feet tall and lean as a willow sapling.

"Well, I've got to be ambling along home," he said. Jimmie knew by the tone of his voice that he was deeply hurt. If he hadn't been, both Spike and grandpa would be putting on their hip boots by now and trying to decide whether they'd take the huckleberry swamp today or the Freeland marsh where the snow lay deep and white for good tracking.

Grandpa lit his pipe leisurely and stood up too.

"Tell you what, Spike," he said, as he looked up at the taller man. Grandpa was not as tall as his companion, but he was solid like an oak tree. "Tell you what," he went on, as he ran his hand through his curling white hair. "We'll each take our own dog and go out after a mink this afternoon. It's perfect tracking weather. The one who gets back first with a mink has the best dog."

Grandma clucked in her 'what's-this-world-coming-to' voice as she kneaded bread dough. Jimmie waited breathlessly for Spike's answer.

"It's a deal, Matt," he said. He put on his coat and cap and left without another word.

When grandpa had put on his hip boots and sheepskin lined jacket and had gone to the barn to untie Lady, Jimmie quietly slipped into his own heavy jacket and boots.

"Now be careful, Jimmie lad," said grandma as she scraped and stacked the dishes. "Watch that gun. Keep the safety on, and take care when you're climbing fences."

"Yes, grandma," said Jimmie. He whistled for Tip, and they followed grandpa to be in on the fun.

Matt decided on the marsh where the tracking was good. He and Lady hadn't gone a hundred yards before they hit a track.

"It's that big old buck I've been hankerin' to get for two years," muttered grandpa. Lady was fast on the track, with her nose laid to the ground, and Jimmie guessed at the speed she was going it was a hot scent. Every few minutes she would lift her head and bay. She had a beautiful voice, full and low. The track doubled back several times. The buck was wily and knew all the tricks.

They followed for an hour, Lady going full tilt, never doubting for more than a moment which way the little brown animal had gone. They crossed a small creek, where the ice lay thick, and on the bank under an old stump that grew close to the waters edge, Lady began to dig in the snow.

"He's holed up here," said grandpa. Jimmie stood motionless waiting and watching. His breath hung frostily in the air.

Just then Spike and Trumpet appeared over a little knoll. Trumpet was on the same track Lady had taken! Jimmie laid a hand on Tip's collar, and they stepped back and watched Spike's black and tan hound come up to the stump. Trumpet laid back his head and bellowed.

Jimmie took a few steps down the creek and waited while the hounds dug at the stump, and the two stood poised with their guns cocked ready for the kill.

Suddenly both hounds seemed a little uncertain. They made whuffing noises in the snow and walked round and round the stump. The two men relaxed and lowered their guns.

"Spike," said grandpa quietly, "I been thinkin' all the way over here. It looks to me like it don't matter which of us gets this mink. It ain't the mink nor the dogs that count. It's you and me bein' friends that's important. After 25 years, Spike—"

"Matter of fact," said Spike, "I was thinkin' pretty much the same thing. Let's call off the bet, here and now."

Jimmie smiled. Suddenly, within a few yards from where he stood, a cautious brown head appeared above a hole in the ice. None of them ever knew why the smart old buck chose that moment to emerge from his hole, but he did. Like a brown blur he darted across the ice. The hair on the back of Jimmie's collie stood straight up. The mink slipped on the ice and came to almost a full stop.

His heart hammering, Jimmie raised the little 410 to his shoulder and fired. Oh, boy! He got him! The mink rolled over and over. Tip skidded over the ice and picked the mink up carefully in his mouth. Then he brought him back to Jimmie. He laid his burden down at his master's feet and wagged his tail.

Jimmie's heart swelled with pride. This was a day he would never, never forget.

He heard the sound of laughter behind him, hearty men's laughter. He turned around, and there were Spike and grandpa slapping each other on the back and laughing till the tears rolled down their faces.

"We've found the best dog, Spike," said grandpa. "It's Tip! And son," he went on, putting his arm around Jimmie's shoulders, "you are undoubtedly the best man."

"EASY DOES IT"

By HELEN HALE

DO NOT ALLOW ACID FOODS such as milk and orange juice to come in contact with the porcelain finish on refrigerator or gas range as they remove the glaze.

Always allow your range to cool before washing. Cold water or a cold cloth may crack the glaze.

A little bit of baking soda added to warm water is ideal for cleaning the refrigerator.

FLUSH THE SINK with boiling water every day, and once a week with a strong solution of washing soda to keep it from clogging.

When you drop grease on the floor, pour ice water on it to harden the grease so that it does not soak into the wood. It's always easier to get off after it's hardened.

Silverware tarnished by egg should be washed immediately. Use a soft brush on ornamental pieces.

Never place silverware on the range or on rubber. Silver serving dishes may be heated in hot water or a warming oven if it does not heat too much.

WHEN SCRUBBING BOARDS that have been used for food preparation, wet brush and apply soap with upward strokes, working with the grain of the wood. Rinse with clear water and dry.

Tinware, graniteware and ironware should be washed in hot water. If browned or burned, it may be cleaned with ammonia or baking soda or a scouring pad.

A WHEEL EGG BEATER should not be allowed to stand in water after using as it will easily rust. Wash and dry immediately and keep water away from handles if they are painted.

Realistic Sense of Time Of Great Value to Child

LEARNING early that time is never free, that you have to make your own spare minutes is a valuable lesson for any child. On the other hand, letting a child do things at his own rate of speed has long been one of the principles of guiding personality growth. But that doesn't mean you should let a child grow up without any sense of the normal amount of time various tasks require. If you do, he will never learn to accumulate leisure to be used for fun and recreation. For leisure is hoarded time, just as financial security is founded on saved money.

The mother of seven-year-old Emily, an habitual dawdler, thought up a clever way of impressing her daughter with the need for more speed in performing single tasks, basing her plan on saved time meaning more time for fun. To do this she started a time bank, a duplicate of the china bank in which Emily saved pennies. Then she made a list of Emily's routine tasks—dressing, eating, making her bed, putting away toys, etc. Keeping in mind that her daughter was a slow-paced youngster, the mother allowed generous amounts of time for each task—for example, twenty-five minutes for dressing when she was certain Emily could accomplish the task in fifteen minutes and that a naturally speedy child could do it in ten. If Emily dressed in twenty minutes, they wrote five minutes on a slip of paper and put it in the time bank. When a spurt of speed saw the job through in fifteen minutes, there were ten minutes for Emily's time account.

On Friday evenings the time bank was opened and the minutes counted. If they amounted to an hour or more Emily was allowed to choose some special fun to enjoy with her parents over the week-end.

Of course, as the child grows older a game such as the time bank should take on stricter rules. That is, as speed increases the time allowance should be lowered. For example, it wouldn't be fair to a dawdler to leave the allotment for dressing at 25 minutes. Even a slow eight-year-old should accomplish it in less time than a seven-year-old. Life continually gives us new tasks which we are able to get done only because, with acquired skill, we can perform the old ones with greater speed. A child must learn this too.

But be careful not to let a child get into a frenzy of competition with himself. Too many of us grow up underestimating the time a task should take. Thus we plan twice as much for a morning as any normal human can accomplish and are unhappy because of a false sense of failure. So try to give your child a realistic sense of time, teaching him to expect interruptions and allow for them without fretfulness. It's a job that may take years, but your child will be as much benefitted by learning thrift in the use of time as in the spending of money.

LAYING DOWN THE RULES TO MARSHALL . . . Gen. George C. Marshall, secretary of state, who more often has a voice in laying down the rules, lends an ear as Packy Doyle, member of the Sun Valley staff, explains the rules just before the noted statesman entered in a game of softball. Mrs. Marshall joined the General in his vacation at Sun Valley, Idaho.

Advertising IS Good News

Specially now, when the world is so full of strife, misery and anxiety, it's good to be able to get the pleasant news that comes in the ads.

About a light-hearted summer turban . . . sportswear coolly stolen from the men . . . a refreshing hot weather beverage . . .

A pipe that promises a smoke-treat . . . a light straw hat for the steaming brow . . .

The ads are reminders that life can't all be woe . . . reminders to be as normal and comfortable as possible . . . reminders to which you can sensibly respond. For the ads lead you to sound values.
